Using Internet Resources to Teach College Math for Liberal Arts

Theresa Jones & Sarah Hanusch
Mathematics Department, Texas State University

Abstract: Too many liberal arts students seem to have low confidence in their mathematical abilities and view mathematics as irrelevant to their future. This presentation demonstrates how Internet resources such as YouTube videos can engage these students in understanding mathematics as well as positively embracing mathematics as pertinent to their futures.